In my youth, I chased crawdads and played in the creeks in blissful happiness with a complete lack of care for anything else going on in the world. As an adult, I escape to the same safe and welcoming woods to chase whitetail, turkey, and squirrels. I cast away my worries quite literally by chasing trout, crappie, bass, and anything that will bite. I am in love with the outdoors, and I am not alone. Many of you already use the woods or lake as an escape. The outdoors is a great place to raise children, be with family, and be alone. What follows are short stories from my life, where I recount my escapes to nature.
