It's Friday Afternoon. Billy Cooper's frustration grows minute, by agonizing, snail moving minute, as his last class of the day drags on.

The last twenty minutes of class, old lady Wickware, his seventh grade history teacher, throws a wrench in his weekend plans. Everybody in his class has to draw a name out of box and do an oral book report on the person or event drawn.

Billy has a full weekend planned that includes baseball practice and the new Matt Damon movie, but he isn't too concerned. Billy figures he will take ten minutes and get the scoop on this William Tell character, whoever that is, and that, as they say, will be that! But when Billy finds himself outside of William Tell's house, his attitude takes a whole different turn
