Kye crept around the creaky old door. Molly had bought a jam jar with her to put the woodland flowers in. She collected blue forget-me-nots as they went. She called to Toby, asking him to wait for her while she picked some more...but, Toby was not there.

Meanwhile Toby's Mum was getting worried. She was anxious because the children were late. She decided to call the police. She grabbed a large torch and ran out of the house, determined to look for the cousins and bring them home safely.

The ambulance soon arrived. They brought a stretcher. Toby was suffering from the cold and was in a bad condition. At least he was alive and safe again. Toby remained in hospital for several days. The cousins decided that their adventure could easily have ended in tragedy. They decided never to spend time in the woods alone again.

The next time they visited the tree house they stayed close together and were very careful when climbing the trees!

As daylight turned to dusk, Sal and Dan became nervous and frightened. They had no idea where they were or what had happened to the rest of the group. They must have taken a wrong turn way back at that fork in the path and they were now a long way from where they had pitched the tent that morning.
