Breeding domestic cats is a fascinating and satisfying labor. The wide diversity within the Cat Fancy enables the breeder to choose a breed that appeals to him or her in respect to size, appearance and/or temperament. From the tiny Singapura, the substantial and powerful Siberian, the hairless Sphynx, the graceful Siamese, the regally beautiful Bengal and the curly coated LaPerm, all are equally feline. It would be difficult for any feline enthusiast not to be able to find a cat, among the many recognized breeds, that did not fulfill his vision of the perfect one.

This book is meant to be a guide for future, would-be breeders. It's also meant to help existing breeders when faced with an inquiry from a new breeder (it can be used as a response rather than having to take the time to write it out or talk it out for each inquiry.) It will be geared specifically toward the Persian breed, but will still be applicable to other breeds.
