Living Without Adult Supervision: A Liberating Experience

One of the unique aspects of living in Bali as a retiree is the absence of adult supervision. Here, you can truly let go of the need for constant approval and enjoy living life on your own terms.

With a laid-back lifestyle and a welcoming local community, Bali provides a perfect environment for retirees to explore their passions and interests. Whether you want to learn traditional Balinese cooking, practice yoga on the beach, or engage in meditation and spiritual retreats, Bali offers a multitude of opportunities for you to reinvent yourself and discover new passions.

Retiree Communities and Support Networks

Living in Bali as a retiree doesn't mean you have to be alone. The island is home to various retiree communities and support networks, where like-minded individuals come together to socialize and support one another. These communities offer a perfect balance between independence and the support system retirees may need from time to time.

Additionally, Bali's low cost of living make it an attractive destination for retirees looking to stretch their retirement savings. From affordable accommodation options to reasonably priced local cuisine, Bali offers a cost-effective alternative without compromising on quality of life.

Retired rewired living without adult supervision in Bali is an exciting and liberating experience. It's a chance to break free from the routines of everyday life and explore new horizons. Bali's natural beauty, rich culture, and vibrant retiree communities make it an ideal destination for those seeking a fulfilling and adventurous retirement lifestyle.

Join author Cat Wheeler on a light-hearted journey to exuberant elderhood in Ubud, Bali. Like her first book Bali Daze, this is a collection of experiences over 16 years of settling in a new country, building a house, engaging the local culture and community and dealing with random wildlife in the roof. It's also a thoughtful look at growing older in a different culture within a closely knit community of expatriates aged 60 and up who embrace life fearlessly and often eccentrically.
