Into the Unknown

With their backpacks filled with essential gear and a thirst for adventure, William and Emily set off on their expedition. As they ventured deeper into the Sahara, the landscape transformed from rocky plateaus to vast stretches of golden sand dunes that extended as far as the eye could see.

Day by day, the duo faced new challenges. The scorching sun beat down relentlessly, leaving them parched and exhausted. Sandstorms would arise suddenly, obliterating their surroundings and making navigation almost impossible. Yet, they pressed on, driven by an unwavering determination to uncover the secrets of the desert.

Unearthing the Secrets

After weeks of relentless trekking, William and Emily stumbled upon a hidden oasis nestled between towering dunes. The sight of lush green palm trees and a crystal-clear pool of water was a welcome respite from the harsh desert environment. Here, they would rest, replenish their supplies, and gather their strength for the final leg of their journey.

As they resumed their quest, the adventurers encountered a nomadic tribe known as the Tuareg. These proud desert dwellers, adorned in vibrant blue robes and turbans, possessed a wealth of knowledge about the Sahara's most treacherous terrains. In exchange for valuable items they had collected on their travels, William and Emily were granted invaluable guidance and insights into the mysterious treasure they were pursuing.

The Lion in the Moon: A Legendary Tale

Legend had it that the treasure, known as "The Lion in the Moon," was guarded by ancient spirits that could only be appeased by those deemed worthy. They were said to possess extraordinary powers and were feared by all who sought the fabled riches.

Nearing their destination, William and Emily encountered a colossal sandstorm that threatened to derail their expedition. In a desperate attempt to survive, they sought shelter within a hidden cave. As the storm raged outside, they discovered a series of intricately carved hieroglyphics lining the cave walls. These ancient writings held the key to unlocking the final mystery of the treasure's whereabouts.

The Ultimate Test

Following the instructions revealed by the hieroglyphics, the adventurers found themselves standing before a towering rock formation that resembled the head of a majestic lion. This, they realized, was the entrance to the hiding place of the Lion in the Moon.

However, the legends proved true. Beyond the rocky facade, William and Emily faced a series of perilous trials, each testing their perseverance, strength, and intelligence. From navigating treacherous underground labyrinths to deciphering cryptic riddles, their every step was met with danger and uncertainty.

Triumph and Legacy

Finally, after countless trials and tribulations, William and Emily stood before the fabled Lion in the Moon. The treasure was revealed to be a magnificent golden sculpture depicting a lion embracing a crescent moon. Its beauty was both mesmerizing and awe-inspiring, a testament to the elusive riches that lay hidden within the Sahara.

The discovery of the Lion in the Moon catapulted William and Emily to fame and fortune. Their incredible tale set hearts on fire, inspiring a new generation of explorers to venture into the unknown. Their legacy would forever be etched into the annals of adventure, proving that even in the face of adversity, the human spirit can conquer all.

Babs and Steve met on a blind date in Dallas, Texas.

Within weeks they were crossing the Saharan Desert in a Mercedes UNIMOG on a 3500-mile journey from Tunis to Togo through seas of powdery-white sand, blinding sandstorms and moon-like vistas of naked lava, their compass pegged on due south.

Deep in the Sahara, they joined Moulay for communal couscous on the rug of his dusty oasis home. In Niger a Fulani nomad took them to his mud hut for sweet tea and offals. In Burkina Faso the police detained them for running security roadblocks and in Togo an angry border guard accused them of shooting John F. Kennedy. They visited a voodoo witchdoctor who shared his secrets of a happy marriage and in a rural village watched as the Africans chased a fierce lion from a full moon.

Without GPS or cell phones, by compass and instinct, Babs and Stephen in their steel-shelled tortoise crossed the skull of Africa in a two-month odyssey over the greatest, harshest unforgiving desert in the world and through the grueling live-and-death poverty of five countries.

Written in two voices, 'hers' and 'his,' "The Lion In The Moon" is the once-in-a-lifetime adventure of a Santa Fe adventurer who meets a Dallas socialite and how they survived the desert and each other.
