Calanais Standing Stones - Witness the Might of Neolithic Scotland

The Calanais Standing Stones, dating back over 5,000 years, are one of Scotland's most extraordinary archaeological sites. These mysterious stone structures, arranged in a cruciform pattern, are thought to have served as a lunar observatory and religious site for the Neolithic community. As you stand among these majestic monoliths, you can't help but be transported back in time, imagining the rituals and ceremonies that once took place here.

Blackhouse Village - Stepping into Traditional Island Life

Journeying to the remote village of Gairrannan, you'll discover the Blackhouse Village, a living museum offering an authentic glimpse into traditional island life. These stone structures, with their thatched roofs and peat fires, were once the homes of Hebridean crofters. Wander through the village, explore the interiors of these historical dwellings, and learn about the hardships and joys of island living.

Stornoway Castle - A Fortress Amidst the Western Isles

Sitting proudly overlooking the town of Stornoway, Stornoway Castle stands as a testament to the turbulent history of the Outer Hebrides. Built in the 16th century, this imposing fortress offers a glimpse into the lives of the Mackenzie clan, who once ruled the area. Explore the castle's grand halls, walk along the battlements, and immerse yourself in the stories of brave knights and feuding clans.

Nature's Majestic Backdrop

As you uncover the historical wonders of the Outer Hebrides, you'll also be captivated by the breathtaking landscapes that provide the backdrop to these ancient sites. From pristine white sandy beaches to rugged mountains and dramatic cliffs, nature's artwork enhances the allure of these historically significant locations.

Isle of Harris - Beyond the Famous Tweed

The Isle of Harris greets visitors with its stunning beaches, including the famous Luskentyre, where turquoise waters meet powdery white sands. Take a moment to soak in the natural beauty before venturing further to explore Harris's rich textile heritage, where the world-renowned Harris Tweed is lovingly crafted.

Callanish Beach - A Serene Haven

Callanish Beach, situated near the Calanais Standing Stones, invites you to unwind and take in the tranquility of this secluded bay. With its striking rock formations and expansive views of the Atlantic Ocean, it's the perfect place to reflect on the ancient wonders you've discovered.

The Isle of Lewis - Cliffs, Castles, and Culture

The Isle of Lewis offers a diverse range of experiences, from exploring the towering cliffs of the Butt of Lewis to visiting the renowned Lews Castle, now home to a fascinating museum and art gallery. Immerse yourself in Gaelic culture through the island's vibrant festivals and traditional music, and let the mystical landscapes transport you to another world.

The Outer Hebrides lie 40 miles to the west of mainland Scotland, forming a barrier to the North Atlantic. Culturally distinct from early prehistory, the islands contain a wealth of historical and archaeological monuments, including the standing stones at Callanish, the magnificent St Clement's church at Rodel as well as numerous brochs, castles, Pitish houses, croft houses and industrial and military buildings.

In addition to descriptions of key historic sites from prehistory onwards and gazetteers covering every place of historical interest, this book also traces the development of the modern environment and landscape of the islands, enabling the visitor to appreciate the sites within their historical and cultural context.
