Journal of a Tour into the Interior of Missouri and Arkansas 1818-1819

[transcribed and proofed in digital text], by Henry Rowe Schoolcraft. Originally published in 1821 for Sir Richard Phillips and Co. in Volume 5 of "New Voyages and Travels," London; containing 102 pages, now in the public domain.

A journal of the exploration of Henry Rowe Schoolcraft (1793-1864), and his traveling partner, Levi Pettibone (1780-1881), from Potosi, Missouri Territory, through the White River area in the Ozarks of Missouri and Arkansas, giving daily observations of the trip, the landscape, their hardships, and the people they met in this wild and mostly unsettled part of the country. Two poems by Schoolcraft are included; one unnamed, and "Transallegania," a fantasy about minerals, at the end of the journal. Spelling of place names are his own.

According to Schoolcraft's later works, parts of this journal had previously been published in "Belleslettres Repository," but this was apparently the first full publishing, and it was done in London. A different version, which omitted much of Schoolcraft's criticism of the Ozark people, was first published in America in 1851 in his "The American Indians, Their History Condition and Prospects, from Original Notes and Manuscripts," and in 1853 in his "Scenes and Adventures in the Semi-Alpine Region of the Ozark Mountains of Missouri and Arkansas."

This eBook has been completely transcribed, proofed and formatted for Kindle, and contains all of the original text.
